THE STREET.

The Money Thoroughfare of the Metropolis-What is Done There, Who Does It and How It is Done.

There is a street in New York that is known to the world more extensively than any street that ever was built, from the building of the Tower of Babel to the finishing touch the masons put on Lombard street. This street has been, as it were, a huge dragon, devouring the fortunes, reputations, hopes and ambitions of the millions, while the few St. Georges get the better of the monster. Or, perhaps, it might even better be compared with a big fish that lives (as all fish do) on the small fry. There are all sorts of small fry.

There are the men who have what is called, in street parlance, a "margin" of say $5,000 with some broker, and they hope and expect to make their living therewith. This margin goes up and goes down, sometimes ahead, sometimes behind, and finally the magnetic attraction of large capital absorbs the little $5,000. This class of men - equently turn up again. They borrow a little money, risk it in the hope of retrieving their bad luck and lose; it was their last possible venture, and to use a well known street expression, "Then I was gone." There are still smaller fry than thesethe men who have perhaps only $400 or $500 and who venture their little all on the turns of the market. Their mode of operating is as follows:-Every ody that is anybody in New York knows where the tock brokers buy and sell their (or somebody else's) stock. It is in the middle of a big room on Broad street. In the middle of the big room is a small ring, and the small ring is surrounded by big iron railing. This ring encloses the legitimate bulls and bears, while ranged all around said railing are the bastards of said animals. That is to say, to be inside of the ring you must be a member of the Stock Exchange, to be outside you must have fifty dollars to pay for the privilege of entering the Long Room, and you can be-whoever you are. Even Brett Harte's heathen Chinee could enter, d Ah Sin would then meet with his peers. If the heathen Chines could carry more aces bowers in his sleeves than the frequenters of this establishment carry in their heads then the bulls and bears nad better "vamose the ranche." These small fry, having a margin small as spoken of, hang the course of the market. If any particular stock looks lively they signal their broker (who is inside the ring), and he buys according to the extent of margin they may have. Should the stock go up, say a half per cent, they sell out and wait for another ice. Some of them make

A GOOD LIVING for a while, but it is only a question of time. These smelts are almost invariably gobbled up by the whales. There was an instance some short time ago of one of the smelts (who had been a whale) making a tremendous pile out of almost nothing, but it all went back to the old place in a few short

There is a curious fact about speculating, or gambling, call it which you will, that few people know. t is this:-Suppose any two persons agree to toss coin for a certain length of time, the one to always toss, the other always to guess, it is an inisputable fact that the one who has to guess must se in the long run. It seems odd, but it has been carefully tried and tested by mathematicians. On the same principle the small fry of Wail street have to guess against the big cliques who actually control the stock market, therefore their eventual loss is almost a certainty. Of course none of them believe this. There are no more confident people in the world than these same sprais. Not one of them but believes he will—either by his own shrewdness and caution or his good luck—become a second Vanderbilt. Where does one in a thousand ever even hold his own? Then there are the whales of the street—the men who have

who are the confroiling power—who can, by dint of their great capital and knowledge of the things that be, put stocks up or downwas may suit them. But even these very big fish ar not the ones who steadily and positively make the money and keep it. There are a number of men, very rich of course, who work on a certain principle and stick to it. This it is. een carefully tried and tested by mathemati-

As a general rule, about once a year there is a As a general rule, about once a year there is a panic, be it big or small. Stocks tumble; most operators get frightened, throw their stocks overboard, and all the "little fish" think that the stock market is going to the devil. Then do these rich fellows sail in. They buy largely of good dividend paying stocks, pay for them outright, take the stock out of the street, lock it up and think no more about it. Stocks may rise and fall even as does a barometer in stormy weather, but they have naught to do with the market. To a dead certainty some day within the year there will be a profit on their purchases, then they sell their stocks and pocket purchases, then they sell their stocks and pocket their profits. And there are many men in this city who, possessing both the capital and the pluck, operate in this way every year.

The great powers that pull the strings and make the puppets dance are rarely seen in the street. The king of rallways—the veteran Commodore—shows his handsome face and white necktie on Harlem lane every day, rather than in Wall street; while the Prince of Erle hasn't "shown up" since he memorable Black Friday, when he attempted to make a speech in Broad street, and got his face slapped for his trouble.

while the Prince of Erie hasn't "shown up" since he memorable Black Friday, when he attempted to make a speech in Broad street, and got his face slapped for his trouble.

THE MAGNATES OF THE STREET to be seen there are such men as—well, do you see that small knot of men standing at the corner of Exchange place? That stout, well built, well dressed man, with an eye like a hawk and a mustache like Victor Emmianuel, with his mouth shut and his ears open, is George Osgood, a son-in-law of the old Commodore's, and one of the richest and most influential bankers connected with the stock market. The tall, slimman, with the little side whiskers, who is taking and stuttering, is W. R. Travers, almost the richest, and andoubtedly the wittlest, of them all. The slim, hervous little fellow, constantly looking behind him, as though he momentarily expected his pocket to be picked, is Billy Osgood, partner and brother of George; and the tall man, with the heavy beard and the nair that wants cutling, is John Garland. Leave this group and move further along Broad street—this man you meet advancing with gigantic strides and enormous feet is known as the American Reindeer. He was a little pushed by the Black Friday business, and it needed a trip to Europe to restore his equanimity.

Here comes a little man, with red whiskers, eyes like a ferret and a face like a fox. He belongs to the large and influential family of Smiths, and was Fisk's right hand man in the panic. Walking heavily and clumsily with him is his shadow, in the shape of Carver, and coming down the street like a steam eagine, recking with perspiration, is the penial and very popular Dr. Field.

Now comes, running as though for dear life, broad shouldered, builet headed, good-natured Arhur Sewell, and watching him from the other side of the street is his partner, the morose and sour looking John Bonner.

Here come a batch of the little street brokers—all members of the board. First comes Harry Nickolas, who thinks he is good looking—and so he is; next, yentermanily, and wonderful to behold.

If you want to make a rapid fortune go to New Street, open a bar and (if you don't drink up all your stock yourself) you will be able to retire in less than no time. Thy to get your customers from among the gold brokers rather than the stock men, as the ner drink every five minutes and the latter only every half hour.

Advice to young men who wish to seem moral—If you want to make a hant of "drinking between drinks" become a gold broker, and you'll never be drinks" become a gold broker, and you'll never be noticed.

And now you, the many thousand readers of boday's Herald, it is time to leave the "street;" for there is Mo Mitchell's nose getting into a coupe, Mo knows just the right time to "come up town," and Mo always follows his nose. Don't think very harshly of the "little fisa," nor yet the "winales" nor even the capitalists who "run the machine." Were you all men of enormous wealth, with a corresponding amount of brain, you would probably bontrol, of try to control, stocks yourselves. Were you the whales of Wall street you would undoubtedly try to make money to the best of your adhity. And were you the small fry—the sprats of stock gambling—why be a little merciful and remember that as Alfred Evelyn says in "Money:"—"It is not infamous to gamble—but to lose."

AN ALLOPATHIC DOSE OF AFFLICTION.

A terrible affliction has overcome the family of Peter Danes, of Patchogue. He went to Blue Point to nurse a relative sick with the smallpox, and was himself attacked with varioloid. On the same day his wife and daughter were stricken down with scarlet fever, and on the day following his son was thrown from a horse and kulled.

There is also to be a representation at the National theatre for the same object.

A SAD BRIDAL EVE.

The Affection of a Setauket (L. I.) Maid-Her Betrothed Drowned or Murdered on the Eve of His Wedding Day.

There's many a slip 'twixt cup and lip," is an axiom of ancient times, but can be applied with every sense of propriety in the present sorrowful instance. On Monday night last a young man in the employ of Judge Strong, of Setauket, named Du Troit, left the beach in a small boat for Port Jefferson, for the purpose of getting a suit of clothing which he had previously ordered, and some trinkets for a young lady. From the residence of his employer a girl of nineteen, quite handsome and withal good natured, accompanied him to the beach, and bade him goodby as he pushed off for the other side. To this girl he was ENGAGED TO BE MARRIED.

and it was for his wedding outfit he was going to Port Jefferson, as on Wednesday they were to be married. From that time to the present nothing has been heard of Du Troit. As he did not present himself on Tuesday morning those who were interested in him felt worried and began to make inquiries regarding him. No one had seen him-The boat in which he departed could not

The boat in which he departed could not be found. The night was dark, and it occurred to some that he might have met with an accident. Wednesday came and went, and so did Thursday, but prought no tidings of Du Troit. On Friday it was thought beat to dredge the bay. The boat was found at the bottom near the Port Jefferson landing, but, notwithstanding the dredging was thorough, not the slightest vestige of the object of the search. The people now entertain the belief that he has

BEEN FOULLY DEALT WITH.

If he perished in the bay his body would have been found. The poor girl is completely broken down with grief. To her the stroke is a sad one, as all her hopes are thus blighted on the eve of the wedding day. A HERALD reporter yesterday interviewed several of the parties. They do not for a moment believe that Du Troit would desert the girl and devise the sinking of the boat to cover suspicion and create a sensation. He was an honest and trustworthy young man. He always carried a large sum of money about his person and on the night in question had more than usual.

Between two and three o'clock yesterday afternoon Charles Mentrup, the proprietor of the liquor saloon at No. 750 Fulton avenue, Brooklyn, had occasion to visit his cellar for spirits when he observed that the Holland gin cask had been tampered with since his last inspection of the barrels. Further investigation elicited the fact that at least ten gallons of gin had been spirited away. Looking to the fastenings of the apartment he found they had but recently been removed, and the thief had rolled a small keg across the sidewalk to the cars, on one of which he was observed to take passage. The owner of the Holland beverage immediately harnessed up a horse and wagon and started off in mad haste down the line of the Fulton avenue cars, watching the platforms of each car as he sped along. At the corner of High and Fulton streets he was rewarded by overhauling his property and its daring custodian. He handed the inief, who gave his name as Charles Fowler, over to the custody of roundsman Phalen who locked him up in the York street station house to answer. The liquor is valued at forty-two dollars. ten gallons of gin had been spirited away. Looking

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

SATURDAY, March 25-6 P. M. On 'Change to-day wheat was unsettled and heavy. The cotton market was strong and fairly active at a slight advance.

THE COTTON MOVEMENT. The cotton movement for the week shows a considerable falling off in the receipts, which, at all the ports, were 81,426 bales, against 102,484 bales the previous week. The total receipts since September 1, 1870, are 3,240,870 bales, against 2,358,317 bales for the corresponding period of the previous year, showing an increase of 882,553 bales in the present crop. The exports from all the ports for the week were 97,833 bales, against 72,562 bales the same week last year. The total exports for the expired portion of the cotton year are 2,169,117 bales, against 1,467,701 bales for the same time in 1869-70.

THE BANK STATEMENT.

The weekly statement of the associated banks shows a further heavy decrease in legal reserve, the loss in which amounts to nearly $3,500,000. The deposits at the same time have run down over $5,000,000, so that the surplus reserved is impaired only $2,178,636. The banks now hold $10,470,990 above the legal reserve, which is a fair margin with which to meet the contingencies connected with the ensuing week, which will be the only and the last period in which activity in money is likely to occur pefore the fall, with its shipments of currency to market the wheat and cotton crops of the West and South. The loss in specie is attributable to the heavy customs payments and the specie shipments of the week, amounting to about $5.250,000, against a disbursement of only $2,250,000 of gold from the Treasury. The statement compares with its predecessor as follows:-

Despite the unfavorable bank statement and the fact that the banks have commenced to contract their loans, money was easier than on any previous day of the week and exhibited the usual Saturday abundance. The general rate on call was four per cent, with exceptions at five per cent on stocks and tour per cent on governments. Prime discounts were quoted six to seven per cent. Foreign exchange was dull after the steamer and nominally unchanged.

GOVERNMENTS STRONG. The government list developed considerable strength as the day progressed, and prices steadily improved until those at the termination of business were the best of the day. The latest street quotations were as follows:—United States currency sixes, 113% a 114; do. sixes, 1881, registered, 115% a 115%; do. do., coupon, 115% a 115%; do. five-twenties, registered, May and November, 112 a 112%; do. do., 1862, coupon, do., 112% a 112%; do. do., 1864, do. do., 112 a 112%; do. do., 1865, do. do., 112 a 112%; do. do., registered, January and July, 110% a 111; do. do., 1865, coupon, do., 110% a 111; do. do., 1867, do. do., 110% a 111; do. do., 1868, do. do., 111 a 111%; do. ten-forties, registered, 108% a 108%; do. do., coupon, 1081/4 a 1081/4. STOCKS STRONG AND HIGHER.

The stock market was generally steady in the morning, and gave promise of becoming duli and heavy, but to the surprise and astonishment of the "bulls" not less than the "bears" the whole list became exceedingly strong despite the announcement of so bad a bank statement, and upon active dealings prices took a sharp upward turn, touching in some instances the highest points made the present season. Lake Shore was perhaps the most conspicuous feature of the day, and advanced from 1001/4 to 1011/4. Northwest common sold at 861/4, and St. Paul common at 611/2. Western Union returned to 5s, and Ohio and Mississippi to 47%. In the miscellaneous shares "C. C. & I. C." advanced to 23, and was rather a feature late in the day.

HAD THE WHITE MAN AID THE NEGRO A COMMON PARENTAGE?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD :-

In your issue of the 18th "Quid Est Veritas" attempted to answer the above question. I am thankful to him for the effort, but it is far from being satisfactory. According to his mode of reasoning I could prove that all animals were originally the same. Comparative anatomy shows a striking resemblance in the structure of all vertebrated antnals: there is not a bone in the human body but finds its analogue in the brute; time, climate and a little stretch of imagination would make the differ-He says I might claim, upon the ground on which I based my argument, a separate creation for all the races of men. Had he read my article more carefully he would have seen that such was claimed to be the case, unless where it is the result of amalgamation. The Jews of Cochin may be to be the case, unless where it is the result of amalgamation. The Jews of Gochin may be browned by the sun, may adopt the costume as well as the customs of the people among whom they dwell, and thus deceive a careless observer, but without amalgamation the natural outline of their features will forever remain the same, and the removal to a temperate climate will in one generation restore the original appearance. Neither time nor climate can place the eyes of a Caucasian in that oblique direction which its so characteristic a feature of the Mongolian. The statement that the Jews are prevented from marrying foreigners by the strictness of their laws is not strictly true, as any reader of his Bible knows. They marry foreigners, provided, first, that all the rites and ordinances of the Jews are a mixed race, and I believe, from this cause, always resemble the people among whom they are for a long time sojourners. The argument drawn from the "hairy sheep" of the West Indies is hardly worth noticing. If it proves anything it is that the hair on the heat of the African should be coarse and straight, because heat changes wool to hair. This is conclusive evidence that it was in his case an original design. In regard to color he says what the negro gains over the white man by his power of radiation of heat he loses by the increase in his absorbtive powers, for all know that a black surface will absorb more heat than a white one. This would be true if the heat in both cases were the same. Heat radiating from the surface of an animal body always carries with it more or less moisture. When poured out upon the skin more rapidly than it can be evaporated it is termed sensible perspiration; otherwise, insensible, and it is this constant evaporation of the circulating fluids of the body that counteracts the heat from without, for it is a well-known fact that quick evaporation will produce a sense of cold. I presume nearly every person is familiar with the process of freezing water by its own evaporation of the cower of the lad browned by the sun, may adopt the costume as well

FROM BEER TO BIER.

Lightermen Invade the Lager Saloon of a Long Island German-One of them Shot Dead. The following despatch was received at Brooklyn

Police Headquarters, from the Seventh precinct station house, last night:-"At forty-five minutes past five this afternoon Dennis McCormack, John Reed and William Meyers, lightermen, went into the lager beer saloon of George Neepe, on this side of the Blissville bridge, when a difference arose between them and Neepe. They finally were put out of the place by the proprietor. McCormack, however, shortly afterwards broke in the window, and pushed in the door leading to the saloon. Neepe then fired one shot from a revolver which did not take effect. Neepe then went behind his bar, and McCormack, who entered the place, came up to the counter and struck the bar with his fist, as he cried out, "Come in, boys, and have a drink." Neepe at this juncture pointed his revolver and shot him through the head. McCormack feil down and immediately expired. The nurderer was arrested and given over to the custody of officer Terrier, of the Seventh precinct. The prisoner is now under lock and key at the Greenpoint station house. McCormack, the deceased, boarded in Union avenue, near Eagle street, Greenpoint. He was a single man and twenty-eight years of age. William Meyers, who witnessed the tragic occurrence, is held as a witness. Neepe, who has a wife and six children, is forty-six years of age and is represented by the police as being a man of violent disposition. take effect. Neepe then went behind his bar, and
